

London to Brighton

Mr Westgate and I set out for the run, it was a 5am morning start, YAWN. We had a straight run with no traffic all the way up to crystal palace (leaving early, I think done it).

With being a bit naughty and by not following the route to the back of crystal palace to accompany the mokes (one of the moke owners didn't like that opps), we also said hello to our German scamp who made the trip.(hats off to him very well done)

We set off for Brighton at 8:30am going out of crystal palace with self preservation society blaring out of Chris's brilliant speakers!! All of a sudden the glorious sun came out to warm us up and by warm I mean boiling hot, blasting down the motor way we went.

Once at Brighton the sheer amount of minis there was breath-taking, as well Ed China with his sofa car, also a record breaker with how many girls can fit in a classic mini.

I would recommend anyone do this event, it is definitely worth it all the way.
